It's just as normal as anything else. MLP is my watercooler show. Something I can watch and then talk to that I've watched in the largest groups (~20) overall. I'd have a really hard time getting a group together to	people about. This is the show watch any other random show.
Just to clarify, we're talking about watching a show and then discussing things after, right? Not being in a strongly suspect would talk in a theatre. Then the only shows we could watch were Archer or the Communisn't enough of a thread of cause and effect to make paying attention worthwhile.
I prefer shows I can get into, and Community doesn't have enough going on in the background to hold my interactions happening in front of your face. It's just a step above sketch comedy in my eyes. Good to way out.	v attention, really. It's all about the tch, but I don't think I'll be seeking it
